Monthly report - June 2021

Global financial markets were fixated on FED indications about future rate increases, leading to some volatility intramonth. However, FED reassurances about rate hikes being still far away calmed investors down and equities posted another month of gains. Longer term yields actually decreased, breaking their upward trend from inflationary pressures. The US Dollar on the other hand surged against major currencies. Commodities were mixed, as energy prices continued to raise while precious metals declined throughout June.

The portfolio ended the month in positive territory driven by gains within the Long/Short Equity allocation, while other styles deducted. Sector focused equity strategies performed best and the majority of the Long/Short Equity strategies were profitable. Event Driven managers were unprofitable while high dispersion within Relative Value led to a negative portfolio contribution. Within Systematic Strategies, Trend-Following deducted while equity quant strategies ended the month in positive territory.

Style allocation as of 30 June 2021 (23 Holdings)
